Disaster Resilience Education Strategy Group

Terms of Reference

This Terms of Reference document is informed by the strategic document *Disaster Resilience Education: Young Australians for a disaster resilient future*

Context

Established in 2015, the Australian Institute for Disaster Resilience (AIDR) is a partnership between the Australian Government Department of Home Affairs, the National Council for Fire and Emergency Services (AFAC), the Australian Red Cross and the Bushfire and Natural Hazards Cooperative Research Centre (BNHCRC).

The AIDR Education for Young People program promotes disaster resilience education for all young Australians, in schools and other educational settings. The program supports initiatives which enable young people to participate in resilient communities, applying knowledge and skills to reduce risk and take protective action before, during and after an emergency or disaster.

The Education for Young People Program functions at two levels: The Disaster Resilience Education Strategy Group (DRESG) and the Disaster Resilient Australia-New Zealand School Education Network (DRANZSEN).

DRESG provides leadership for the Education for Young People program by identifying strategies and opportunities to support educators learning and teaching about disaster resilience. DRESG provides leadership and direction for DRANZSEN, promoting collaborative partnerships between emergency service agencies, the education sector and others to enable young people to participate in resilient communities, working together to reduce the risk of disaster.

Aims of DRESG

1. To advocate for disaster resilience education (DRE) in all Australian schools and other educational settings
2. To establish and communicate a shared understanding of disaster resilience education with teachers and learners, aligned with contemporary practice, research evidence and policy.
3. To support and promote effective learning partnerships between emergency service agencies (and related organisations) and the education sector.
4. To support and promote the participation of children and young people in community action for disaster risk reduction and resilience.
5. To support and promote the protection of children before, during and after an emergency or disaster.
